

PPR league scoring 1 point per catch, 1 pt. per 10 yards and 6 per TD.

Rank	Wide Receiver	Trending up	Trending Down	Target
9/7	Last updated	Scott Atkins from SI Fantasy – WIDE RECEIVER RANKINGS - @ScottFantasy
1	Michael Thomas, NO	My number four overall pick. No brainer. You don't need me to tell you how good he is.
2	Davante Adams, GB
3	DeAndre Hopkins, ARI	A former number one ranked fantasy player in the world told me that in Arizona, Hopkins will challenge Thomas for the receptions title in 2020. Good enough for me.
4	Julio Jones, ATL
5	Tyreek Hill, KC
6	Mike Evans, TB	I've been thinking about bumping Evans for a long time and this morning I finally decided to rip the cord. The Brady to Evans connection is going to be fun to watch. Evans loves the deep ball. Brady's arm is questionable, hence the reason for this ranking.
7	Chris Godwin, TB	Shawn Childs has as his number two receiver overall. I have decided that Evans will have the bigger fantasy season, but both will be extremely good for fantasy drafters.
8	Kenny Golladay, DET
9	Allen Robinson, CHI	8 and 9 are interchangeable for me. I went with the more stable QB situation. Robinson is an elite WR who excels in contested situations and is fully recovered from any past injuries, but this Foles/Trubisky thing is problematic.
10	D.J. Moore, CAR
11	Cooper Kupp, LAR	I love everything about his game. 94 receptions last season, 10 TDs and they lose a top WR (Cooks) and replace him with a Reynolds promotion. Nothing should change here. Another great season is on tap for the name I love to say.
12	A.J. Brown, TEN	Very explosive rookie season who almost led the league in yards after catch. This should obviously come down in 2020, but he's still proven to be a force to be reckoned with. Brown could easily finish with 80+ receptions, 1,200-1,400 yards and 8-10 TDs.
13	JuJu Smith-Schuster, PIT
14	Adam Thielen, MIN
15	Amari Cooper, DAL
16	Calvin Ridley, ATL	Ready to take a big leap up.
17	Terry McLaurin, WAS	Ready to take a big leap up. He has just scratched the surface. Don't let the 2nd half split last year detract you from this draft spot.
18	Robert Woods, LAR
19	D.K. Metcalf, SEA	He's been on absolute fire to start camp, continuing where he left off in the playoffs. Don't worry about his lack of targets last season. That's coming way up in 2020.
20	Odell Beckham Jr., CLE	Read my pre-season pro.
21	D.J. Chark, JAC
22	Courtland Sutton, DEN
23	Keenan Allen, LAC

24	Tyler Lockett, SEA	You have to come away with at least two of these top 24 WRs. 5-10, 182 lbs. Lockett can run all the routes that Metcalf can't, and has a great shot at outperforming this draft position.
25	Marquise Brown, BAL	WR1 upside with the blazing speed, but injuries have derailed some.
26	Stefon Diggs, BUF
27	Tyler Boyd, CIN
28	Will Fuller, HOU
29	DeVante Parker, MIA
30	Jarvis Landry, CLE
31	Michael Gallup, DAL
32	Diontae Johnson, PIT
33	T.Y. Hilton, IND	Wish we could have seen some chemistry between he and Rivers. Plus, he seems to get banged up rather frequently. Let others take a shot.
34	Preston Williams, MIA	Might be the best WR on the team, and I'm a big Parker guy.
35	Deebo Samuel, SF	May be ready week one. Underwent surgery in June to repair a Jones fracture in his left foot. Never good, but Shanahan now hopes he'll be ready for the season opener. I'm not buying it, but I love his potential when healthy. He's a buy and hold.
36	Darius Slayton, NYG	One high stakes player I was speaking to called him "the next Steve Smith". While I won't go there, Slayton is a talented deep threat ready to emerge. He is NOT the fourth of fifth option as people are suggesting. Let's recap why I'm so excited about his potential in 2020. In 2019, he caught 48 receptions for 740 yards and eight touchdowns despite starting in only nine games all season. While some are quick to point out his production came due to injuries at other positions, this just opened the door for him to emerge as Daniel Jones' favorite (yes I said favorite) and most potent aerial weapon in the offense. Sterling Shepard is unreliable having unfortunately sustained multiple head injuries, including two last season, (both coming within three weeks of each other). Golden Tate is 32 years of age and has reached the elder mentor role. He'll be the number one receiver in this emerging offense which is switching to more of a vertical passing game this season. His release and route running are tremendous, and he showed exceptional ability in contested catch situations. He must work on run blocking to complete the package, but the chemistry is already there with Jones and Slayton represents tremendous value in drafts as a WR4 ready to provide WR2 production. 7th round to 10th round ADP. Target the 8th.
37	Jerry Jeudy, DEN	After Taylor, I think he's the second-best rookie in this class. Lock now has a ton of weapons.
38	A.J. Green, CIN	Nobody knows if he can stay on the field, so he's down here. If he plays 16 games and has most of his speed back, he could obviously be a WR2.
39	Marvin Jones, DET
40	Jamison Crowder, NYJ	Darnold's favorite target. One of my fellow drafters reminded me how often he's going to get peppered with targets.
41	CeeDee Lamb, DAL	Explosive potential, but he's in a crowded situation. Can still produce, but may not be reliable week to week without an injury
42	Brandin Cooks, HOU
43	Emmanuel Sanders, NO	This is just a sweet setup for Sanders. Look out.
44	Julian Edelman, NE

45	Parris Campbell, IND	His ADP is WR60, so you can wait, but don't sleep on him because he didn't perform his rookie season. He's set to start every snap from the slot in year 2. He has WR1 upside and TY will likely miss time.
46	Christian Kirk, ARI
47	Mike Williams, LAC
48	Henry Ruggs III, LV	Explosive and the top receiver taken in the draft to the surprise of many.
49	Sterling Shepard, NYG	Sterling Shepard is unreliable having unfortunately sustained multiple head injuries, including two last season, (both coming within three weeks of each other).
50	Brandon Aiyuk, SF	It's clear Shanahan has Aiyuk rated as the #2 WR on his board behind Lamb. Huge opportunity to produce right out of the gate with the injuries to Samuel and Hurd. Explosive on sweeps and screens but will have to learn the offense. I'm a big fan. Has a 12th Round ADP so grab others first.
51	Anthony Miller, CHI
52	N'Keal Harry, NE	Loads of potential here. Let's see if he has the routes down this year.
53	Justin Jefferson, MIN	He's one Thielen injury away from being a WR1 right out of the gate. Early reports have Olabisi Johnson in front of him but that shouldn't last long.
54	Mecole Hardman, KC
55	Jalen Reagor, PHI	Shoulder injury has him missing the first month of the season, however he has the goods to be a number one wide receiver but will probably see some special teams early on. I'm willing to wait for him.
56	John Brown, BUF
57	Breshad Perriman, NYJ	Don't sleep on him! Really like what I saw late last season and he was rewarded with a nice contract to a team who will be playing from behind a lot this season. I'm real close to adding him in the tier above.
58	Bryan Edwards, LV	The star of training so far. Keep an eye on. I have a Ju Ju vibe about him. Was the top rated devy WR after his sophomore and junior seasons and then suffered a knee injury and later broke his foot before the combine. He was on his way to a 1st round grade.
59	Allen Lazard, GB	When talent meets opportunity. He gets a shot to contribute right away.
60	Laviska Shenault Jr., JAC	Flashing really well. The coaches can't stop talking about him. Keep an eye on and snag late in your draft. You don't have to take him this early, but this is where I have him ranked. You can probably snag him in your last round.
61	DeSean Jackson, PHI	You're twisting my arm. Fine. He'll start for the first month of the season and then who knows.
62	Hunter Renfrow, LV
63	Sammy Watkins, KC	His on the field percentage was higher than Hardman's, and I'm not convinced that will change this year. We're probably all too low on Watkins.
64	Robby Anderson, CAR	Teddy briefly practiced with him when he was a Jet, so maybe there's some familiarity.
65	Golden Tate, NYG
66	Denzel Mims, NYJ	The rookie has been banged up a few times in camp. He should become Darnold's favorite deep threat.
67	Steven Sims, WAS
68	Curtis Samuel, CAR
69	Michael Pittman Jr., IND

70	Russell Gage, ATL	The number 3 Wide Receiver in Atlanta has value.
71	Van Jefferson, LAR	Has a great opportunity to seize the number 3 job but has a talented Josh Reynolds in front of him. With an injury however, he's in 3 WR sets.
72	Corey Davis, TEN	The "I was wrong" about player of 2018 and 2019. I still believe he can be good, but he must believe it first.
73	Marquez Valdes-Scantling, GB	Trending up this pre-season. Maybe he turns the corner.
74	Alshon Jeffery, PHI	Working back from foot surgery, with no timetable to return. Will start the season on PUP.
75	Tre'Quan Smith, NO	Drew Brees expects a breakout. I'm going to listen!
76	Olabisi Johnson, MIN	Running as the WR2 currently. Jefferson is clearly the superior receiver, but we might see a few quality starts out of the gate.
77	Larry Fitzgerald, ARI
78	J.J. Arcega-Whiteside, PHI	Looks like he's lining up as a starter until Reagor and Jeffery come back. While his rookie campaign was a bust, his potential coming into the league was there.
79	Tee Higgins, CIN	Great upside, especially if Green is not 100%.
80	James Washington, PIT
81	Dede Westbrook, JAC
82	Randall Cobb, HOU
83	Cole Beasley, BUF	With the addition of Diggs, he's now the #3 in Buffalo. Played very well last season
84	John Ross, CIN	Touchdown machine last season. Let's see if he can keep it up.
85	Kenny Stills, HOU
86	Chase Claypool, PIT	An explosive red zone threat from Notre Dame scoring 13 TDs last season. With the Steelers playing 70% of their snaps from a 3-WR set, Claypool has a chance to see some action.
87	Kendrick Bourne, SF	The Fantasy Exec's Pre-Season Pro explains this ranking. He should be involved early on. It will be up to him to hold on to the job after Deebo comes back.
88	Tyler Johnson, TB	Save for your last pick, but he has immense upside. Unfortunately for him, he has been injured and missed all of camp so far, so Watson and Miller are getting all the reps with Brady. We've seen other players excel in this situation, but it makes it more difficult. I have faith he will be roaring by mid-season.
89	Devin Duvernay, BAL	The coaching staff moved up to get him in the third round. A 4.39 40 and a thick 5-10 200-pound frame makes for an intriguing situation.
90	Jakobi Meyers, NE	Perhaps a nod of confidence when Sanu was cut.
91	Antonio Gandy-Golden, WAS	Rookie has upside.
92	Miles Boykin, BAL
93	Andy Isabella, ARI	It's hard when you're playing behind one of the greatest receivers of all time. His time will come.
94	Demarcus Robinson, KC	The #5 target for KC has value in best ball leagues, but week to week will be hard to start.
95	Phillip Dorsett, SEA	Fastest player on the roster apparently.
96	Chris Conley, JAC
97	Danny Amendola, DET

98	KJ Hamler, DEN
99	Ted Ginn, CHI
100	Taysom Hill, NO
101	Josh Reynolds, LAR	Looks like Van Jefferson may be passing him on the depth chart. I'm mildly surprised by this. I didn't think it would be that quick.
102	Zach Pascal, IND
103	Auden Tate, CIN
104	Willie Snead, BAL
105	Adam Humphries, TEN
106	Nelson Agholor, LV
107	Keke Coutee, HOU
108	David Moore, SEA
109	Mohamed Sanu, FA
110	Antonio Brown, FA	At some point, it's worth a flier, but be prepared to hold him for a loong time.